MRH WEEKEND REVIEW

CHICAGO KING - 1ST - BEAUDESERT BM55 1400M

It was great to see Chicago King return to the winners' stall on Saturday at Beaudesert. It was an incredible ride from Boris Thornton, who found a gap at exactly the right time to pounce on his opposition. Hopefully, this can kickstart a good run of form for this son of Street Boss.

NEWY - 3RD - NEWCASTLE BM64 1250M

Newy was solid in defeat on Saturday at his hometown track, Newcastle. He led the race up and was just run down late, losing by under half a length. He is racing well without winning, and should be hard to beat in a similar grade at his next start.

HIGH TEMPO - 2ND - BALLARAT BM66 2000M

High Tempo was narrowly defeated at Ballarat on Sunday in her first time out to 2000m. She had to be taken back from the wide gate and rattled off some incredible late splits to finish 2nd. She showed us on Sunday that she's got some real tactical versatility, and she continues to race in career-best form this preparation.

VOLKANO - 2ND - MILDURA BM55 1200M

Volkano returned in great order on Sunday at Mildura. This was his first start for new trainers, Jess and James Tzaferis, and he performed super. He was narrowly defeated, and it looks like he's in for a great preparation.

MAWJOOD - 3RD - RANDWICK BM78 1400M

Mawjood was back to his usual, honest self on Saturday at Randwick. He sat up on speed and looked the winner with 400m to go, but was grabbed late. He lost no admirers, and he's proving to be a very consistent Saturday grade performer.
