MRH WEEKEND REVIEW

KARASMATIC - 7TH - PAKENHAM BM62 1200M

Karasmatic, the son of Vadamos, returned with an encouraging effort first-up over an unsuitable 1200 metres. He travelled kindly throughout but lacked the necessary sharpness over the closing stages, a reflection of the sprint trip being short of his best.

The Lindsay Park Racing team will look to target some races over further at some point in her prep, but have decided to keep her to the mile for her next start on March 10th.

VOLAKNO - 2ND - TERANG BM56 1200M

Volkano went close to adding another victory at Terang, producing a strong effort in a race that appeared well within reach on paper. He was competitive throughout but was unable to land the decisive blow in the closing stages, ultimately just missing the win.

Tony and Calvin were pleased with the performance and indicated he remained well placed to break through again in similar company.

LAUDING - 4TH - CRANBOURNE BM70 2025M

Lauding signalled a return to form for MyRacehorse owners at Cranbourne on Friday night, putting in a competitive performance in a strong, metro-grade contest. The gelding appeared to relish the step up to 2000 metres, travelling comfortably and holding his own against quality opposition.

The Ciaron Maher team are hopeful that the effort would boost his confidence for the remainder of the campaign, with the belief he could land a race of similar depth if he maintained that level of consistency.

TRANSCEND - 9TH - ROSEHILL BM78 1300M

Transcend returned to the races on Saturday and endured a tough run in transit, racing three and four wide without cover throughout. Jockey Tommy Berry presented her into the race on the turn, but the early work told late as she tired over the concluding stages.

There were still positives to take, however, with Transcend settling more kindly than in previous runs, a sign of the work of trainer Michael Freedman and his team was paying dividends as she continued to mature.

MRH WEEKEND REVIEW

JUST FINE - 9TH - ROSEHILL GROUP 3 1900M

MyRacehorse flag bearer, Just Fine, resumed after almost a year away from the races and produced an encouraging effort, settling prominently before weakening late to be beaten just under three lengths. Given the long layoff, the run suggested he would derive benefit from the outing.

The Waterhouse and Bott stable noted that careful placement and a track with some give remained key to his chances at this stage of his career, with improvement expected as he builds fitness into the preparation.

NINJA - 1ST - ROSEHILL GROUP 2 1400M

Ninja stamped himself as a genuine Group 1 contender with a decisive victory in the Hobartville Stakes, defeating established Group 1 Caulfield Guineas winner, Autumn Boy, and Group 1 Spring Champion Stakes winner, Attica. The performance confirmed Ninja's ability to match strides with the leading three-year-olds in the country, with attention now turning to the Randwick Guineas.

Trainer Michael Freedman and jockey Tommy Berry both indicated that there is further improvement still to come, making the result an emphatic redemption after the gelding's luckless run in the Magic Millions Guineas the month prior.

INCANDESCENT - 3RD - WANGANUI 2YO SWP 1200M

Incandescent returned to the races in New Zealand on Sunday after almost seven weeks between runs and, without the benefit of a lead-up trial, appeared just short of ideal fitness to win. He travelled well enough and was tough late, a run that Roger and Robert expect him to improve sharply from.

With that outing under his belt, Incandescent was tipped to strip fitter and prove hard to beat at his next start.

APOCALYPTIC & TOMMY BERRY

HIGH TEMPO - 1ST - MOE BM56 1600M

High Tempo proved a class above her rivals on Sunday, powering away to win a BM56 over 1600 metres by 2.75 lengths. The mare appeared to have returned in excellent order, backing up a pass mark first up run this preparation with a decisive victory.

The Hayes boys indicated she would remain at the mile for her next assignment on March 10, a race viewed as an ideal stepping stone as her campaign builds momentum.
